Fikri Özdemir

Human Resources Executive Director, Beko
Istanbul, Türkiye

Summary

I am a business leader who moved into Human Resources after more than two decades of leadership experience across purchasing, technology, product management, manufacturing and operations. Today, as Executive Director of Human Resources at Beko, I work with our leadership teams to shape the organization, talent, leadership and culture needed to support our global business priorities. Earlier in my career, I led strategic purchasing operations, managed end-to-end factory operations, and served as Chief Technology Officer of Voltbek, the Koç and Tata joint venture in India. These experiences gave me a practical understanding of how businesses create value, how organizations perform and what enables transformation to succeed. I now bring this business perspective into HR. I believe people and organization decisions must be closely connected to business strategy. Sustainable performance is created when strategy, structure, leadership, capability and culture move in the same direction. My focus is building resilient organizations, strengthening leadership and critical capabilities, while helping people navigate business growth and transformation.
